

New Orleans Hot Dog News. Company picnics increase company morale!

Simply putting all of the best players on the same team does not guarantee a winning combination. Look at the Washington Redskins football team from several years back. All the high dollar skill players in the world could not put the team in the playoffs. It was the rag-tag bunch of no-names, now known as the New England Patriots, that were able to go all the way.

It's no secret that social events are powerful ways of building this type of team. These events build bonds between fellow co-workers as well as between employees and management. When everybody has an opportunity to hang out together and let their hair down, it can really forge a tight-knit team. The kind of team that will go to extra lengths to ensure the success of their co-workers and managers....their friends.

An event like this does not have to be ridiculously expensive. In fact, The Dog Haus is capable of catering an event like this for a fraction of what the average catering company costs. Our service provides you with cost saving options that other companies just can't even begin to offer. All with the "cool factor" of having a real live professional grade hot dog cart present. It never fails to make passers by smile. It's shiny, it smells great and it makes some of the most delectable summertime treats around.
